INTRODUCTION

This Strategic Plan is the result of the work carried out, initially, in a participatory process of Strategic Planning of evaluation, analysis and determination of changes and strategic lines, implemented by the organization from June to November 2019, followed by a second period, starting on March 2020, incorporating the reflections and new perspective of the InteRed analysis by the situation produced by the COVID 19.

Over the course of 5 months, InteRed has promoted an intense process of reflection and participation in which those who work and collaborate in the organization have been involved, as well as other relevant actors related to InteRed, such as educational centers, local social organizations and individuals. In addition to the organizational and coordination meetings, there have been general and consultation meetings. Throughout the process, various tools for analysis, debate and participatory decision-making were used, with the help of two external consultants.
Internally, the leadership of the process was carried out by an internal commission made up of representatives of the organization: two persons from national delegations, one from international delegations, the planning and evaluation coordinator, one person from the team of programing and line of gender, and two people representing the management team. Their mission has been to accompany, encourage and lead the process and proposal.

In March 2020, two commissions were set up to analyze the challenges and opportunities regarding the impact of COVID on the work of InteRed at the international and national levels. The results served to validate the changes and strategic lines defined in the Strategic Plan as well as to emphasize some of the approaches from which we at InteRed work.

This document contains the InteRed strategy with the main milestones to be achieved for the 2020-2024 period, approved by the Management Team and Board of Trustees in October and November 2020, respectively, thus, contributing to the institutional commitment to the Sustainable Development Goals of the Agenda 2030.
Facing this panorama leads InteRed to reaffirm itself in those lines that it has been already working and that are a sign of its identity:

- the defense of the right to education, also understood as a common good for all peoples and groups everywhere in the world: quality, inclusive and equitable education that contributes to transforming the local and global reality.
- the defense of the rights of women and girls, contributing through education and with training processes of coeducation to the reduction of sexist violence that each day is becoming more visible against women and girls.
- the participation and protagonism of young people in processes of social transformation, placing volunteering at the center of the organization, which opens up opportunities for their civil participation.

And, at the same time, this Strategic Plan offers us new horizons:
• taking a further step in supporting individuals and groups that are in situations of greater vulnerability and inequality, hence the effort to reinforce our presence in the poorest countries in Africa and in Haiti; and work with migrants and refugees in the different areas where we are present.

• incorporating the humanitarian aid into the Development with an educational perspective.

We also want to say that in order to achieve these changes and transformation in society we need lots of individuals and entities joining this task in different ways, dreaming and making this vision of InteRed come true: an organization that promotes educational processes for personal and collective changes in favor of social justice, equity and the caring for people and nature, open to participation and dialogue with groups and persons from different countries.

We thank each and every one who have made this Plan possible, which gives us the opportunity to contribute from InteRed, once again, again, to the social transformation and the caring for the world we live in -an opportunity to contribute to the Agenda 2030 whose motto is: "Transforming our world"; to continue working in order to build a model of society and system different from the current one.

Finally, it comes to my mind a text from the Assembly of All Associations a.e. 2018 of the Teresian Association in its section Weaving diversity, inclusion, dialogue and equality: A new look, the construction of current societies also involves the search for equality and equity for all. This implies introducing a mode of access to reality, "new eye glasses" with which to understand the world and life, and intervene in our reality transforming it.

We consider diversity and intercultural encounters as a wealth in our societies and we want to continue walking towards an education that is more committed to social transformation. We are committed to a greater presence of the approaches to human rights, gender and intersectionality, interculturality, environmental sustainability and culture for peace in all our interventions and especially, in our vision of education.

As organization we reaffirm our determination to influence the causes of rights violations in the areas in which we are present. The effects of the COVID19 pandemic confirm the strategies identified. From our identity for the right to education and women’s rights, we also want to contribute to the guarantee of other rights for an integral development of the person, and that is why we will foster, through strategic alliances, the implementation of other rights such as food, health, work, peace....
Main Milestones To Be Reached:

We will have expanded the number of our associates and collaborators, incrementing our own funds and diversifying the public funds.

We will have contributed to the fact that more young people might be participating in and leading processes of social transformation in their own contexts and in InteRed.

Volunteering will be at the center of the organization, participating and making decisions and with more young people collaborating in the life of the organization.

We will have contributed, through the co-education and social and political advocacy, to the identification of sexist violence and its causes, and to its reduction in the areas in which we work, especially among young people.

We will be a more agile and fresh organization, more accountable of what we do and how we contribute to the change.

We will have incorporated new advances, as an organization and in our interventions, in a culture of environmental sustainability.

We will have a presence and we will be supporting more development initiatives in some of the most impoverished countries in the world and with the most vulnerable population: Haiti, DR Congo and other countries in Africa.
STRATEGIC CHANGES

Are the issues or changes priority to those wants to contribute in a way decisive and those to guide work for years to come.
Collectively, we will advance the accomplishment of this change, which seeks to continue promoting a Transformative Education. We understand it as something that aims to promote teaching-learning processes that contribute to guaranteeing the right to education, understood it as a common good, for all persons and communities in the world, with a humanistic and inclusive perspective, which recognizes and values diversities of all kinds. A Transformative Education that promotes a critical, responsible and committed Global Citizenship, at the personal and collective levels, with the transformation of the local and global realities to build a world more just, more equitable and more respectful of diversity and of the environment, in which each and every person can develop freely and satisfactorily.

We will have as our horizon the Agenda 2030 for Sustainable Development, and in particular the Sustainable Development Goal 4, which aims at guaranteeing an inclusive and equitable quality education, and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all.

Our approaches and methodologies will be the mechanisms that may allow us to achieve the change. Methodologies that are already part of our pedagogical culture and are in a constant process of construction and renewal. Among them, we highlight cooperative learning; artistic and playful-theatrical methodologies; the systematization of experiences, etc. Training and support for teachers and educators will be essential to achieve this change.

Now, in the framework of COVID19, we will adapt these methodologies in such a way that they may allow us to continue working for the right to education, taking into account the approved sanitary prevention limitations, such as social distancing and online training. It is a big challenge but one that we will keep in mind at all times as long as COVID19 remains. At the same time, since the pandemic situation has revealed the big social and educational gaps, we will reinforce our actions to “not leave behind” any girl or boy of school age (there is fear of a growth in school dropout rates due to the differences in digital opportunities), to support teachers and promote technical-professional training for young people and women.

We will advance towards an educational construction for everyone, which is what will allow us to advance towards a broad education concept, recognizing lines of work with the possibility of synergies and mutual enrichment. An education, which, in short, is at the service of a world interwoven by the interdependence of local and global dynamics and is capable of training analytical, critical, reflective people, with the ability to influence and transform reality in the face of inequalities and conflicts.
To promote the prevention of sexist violence through coeducation

As a civil society organization, InteRed has been developing in recent years an important effort to contribute to the prevention of sexist violence through education and has done it from the perspective of coeducation, which, as reflected in the Positioning of Education of InteRed is a feminist educational and political position that entails articulating all educational practices from the “purple glasses” of gender equality and, with them, unveiling, dismantling and modifying the systems of domination that allow men to exercise power over women, as well as preventing and combating the multiple forms of sexist violence present in education and in society.

The commitment to coeducation has been gaining strength in recent years. In Latin America, it has happened through the cooperation projects with partner organizations, working with educational communities (teachers, students, parents, educational authorities), contributing to the creation of safe environments through sharing experiences, as well as the incorporation into the educational curriculum of components related to the ethics of caring, affective-sexual education, the recognition and appreciation of diversity, and the strengthening of the leadership of young people as agents of change with their peers. In Africa and Asia, by advancing in the incorporation of the gender perspective in the developing projects, mainly in non-formal education settings, thus contributing to the transformation of those local areas. All the initiatives developed in this change incorporate the intersectional perspective, thus attending to the inequality gaps inherent in each context.
In Spain, through education for development projects, training processes in coeducation have been promoted and tools have been published to mainstream the gender approach. Special mention should be made of the institutional campaigns, aimed at promoting equity and the defense of women’s rights.

These lines of work, which have been the "identity signs" of InteRed, are more pertinent than ever, since they will allow to respond to the needs marked by the context of setbacks in the rights of women, and especially of girls, adolescents and young adults, countering hate speech, denouncing violence and showing diversity as a wealth, which contribute to the real exercise of the right to a life free of violence for children, adolescents and women, and therefore to the achievement of SDGs 4 and 5 of the Development of Agenda 2030.

The institutional campaign that will be carried out during the term of this plan, "It is Time for Equality", is fully aligned with this priority.
To prioritize and accompany youth participation and leadership in the processes of social transformation

At InteRed, we have been taking until now timid steps in accompanying the participation and leadership of young people in the processes of social transformation. But with the learnings of these past years, the challenges we are facing in the current situation, and the Teresian Association’s own commitment to the youth as one of its mission lines for the six-year term, we want to focus the attention on the youth as an engine of change in our local and global realities. We want to take a further step in the commitment to promote their leadership and protagonism, knowing that our work is that of providing formation and support. We acknowledge the experiences and path already traveled with the implemented work under the methodologies “Young people involved in caring” and “Walk the labyrinth”, within the framework of our previous institutional campaign Act with Care, and through the many years of experience promoting the training voluntering; identity sign of InteRed.

No one better than InteRed to provide impulse, creativity and energy to the transformation of our unequal world into another that is more livable, enjoyable and free of violence. For this, we need the entire educational community to accompany these young people. In these actions, we find a profile of young people who are digitally natives who use Smartphone and tablets, communicate by WhatsApp and carry technology in their genetic code. For them, it is essential to be active individuals who produce their own content on YouTube or applications such as Vine, blogs and personal websites. Diversity is inherent to them; justice moves them and they value sharing. They are dynamic and enterprising people. We acknowledge the emergence of a fresh, analytical, critical and vigorous youth movement, which is already a reality. With increasing hope, we witness how young people from all over the world make their claims on global issues such as feminisms, environmental sustainability and climate change (Fridays for Future Movement), among others.

This reality invites us to take on the challenges posed by intergenerational dialogue and to be aware that cultural distances forces us to constantly learn new concepts, new languages, beliefs, convictions, ways of feeling, etc. In InteRed, we assume these challenges and we want to respond by moving hand in hand with the youth, giving them the space and passing on to them a witnessing for the development of actions that may transform the world in which they surround themselves.

InteRed will have as legal reference in this line the International Treaty on Youth Rights for Ibero-America, and the United Nations Program of World Action for The Youth. As for the Agenda 2030, although there is no specific SDG on youth, it is the “bearer of the torch” of such Agenda, since it plays a fundamental role in its implementation. The well-being, participation and empowerment of youth are key drivers of sustainable development and peace around the world.

To promote individual and social transformation processes that may reduce inequality gaps due to gender and allow women to fully exercise their rights.

From the beginning, InteRed, has been promoting and accompanying projects in favor of women’s rights in various countries in Latin America, Africa and Asia. Since the approval of the InteRed Gender Policy and the III Strategic Plan, the institutional priority in this line of work was expanded, thus increasing the network of local partner organizations.

Throughout this Strategic Plan, in a context in which we see how some fundamentalist discourses advance trying to go backwards in the recognition of women’s rights, the subordination and control of their bodies or the naturalization of sexist violence, it is more pertinent that ever to continue accompanying initiatives that allow not to move backwards in the legislative, normative and social advances that have cost so much and that are the result of the tireless work of thousands of women around the world who, well organized, fight and defend the rights of all.

All the actions that InteRed will support within the framework of this plan will be framed, as up to now, in alliance with local partner organizations from different countries that, from questioning capitalist, colonialist and heteropatriarchal systems, promote those processes of individual and collective empowerment of women who continue being limited in the exercise of their rights as a consequence of the multiple forms of oppression and structural exclusion that this model imposes on them.

Along this line, projects will be supported in a line of work that has gained strength and prominence in recent years, aimed at guaranteeing the right of every woman to a life free from sexist violence, mainly through the strengthening of community or local structures.
that favor the access of women victims and survivors to supportive care means; in the same way it will continue supporting processes of alphabetization, as well as technical and political training as an essential path for empowerment, self-recognition of their rights and protagonism in their own life process.

All projects, agreements or initiatives supported by InteRed will have as a reference the legal framework that promotes the political and structural changes necessary to guarantee women’s rights (CEDAW, Beijing, Istanbul, Belem do Pará), as well as the ODS 5 that aims to achieve gender equality and the empowerment of all women and girls.

The effects of the pandemic give even greater relevance to the lines of action mentioned in this document. In the words of the Secretary General of the United Nations: “The limited progress in gender equality and women’s rights achieved over the decades are in danger of recession as a consequence of the COVID-19 pandemic”, therefore urging to put women and girls at the center of their recovery efforts, since they are the most affected by the pandemic and also because of their fundamental role in the recovery in their communities. In short, it will be crucial to implement projects that strengthen the leadership of women in response to the emergency and post-emergency situation as well as to deepen interventions aimed at promoting the appreciation of caring practices and co-responsibilities, as well as to intensify the work regarding the women’s right to a life free of violence, paying special attention to young girls and adolescents.
